““Mr. T.” Is what I called him. He will be missed by all who knew him. I remember the last time I spoke with him was when he was at the store shopping for some things I recommended to use for the flu( natural medicines like Zinc, Blackberries, Plums etc.). His last words to me was“thanks, love you man”. And I responded“love you too my brother”. This reminds us all of the value of time. The time we spend being in the very presence of our loved ones, the words we speak to them,and the times we have to be of service to them. The reason being is we never know when that will be our last time to experience those things mentioned above. The fact being is that before the next time we have the opportunity to speak with them, hear them,or do anything for them or they do anything for us, death could strike, either them or us. I am so happy that our last words spoken to each other were words of brotherly love. Like I said, he will be missed. I hope to see him again on that " great gettin' up morning", when Jesus comes. May God continue to bless the entire family. I love you all.
